What is MOM2MOM?

Imagine the daily worry. How will my child's life unfold? How will this diagnosis of special needs impact relationships with family members and friends, finances and overall health and well-being?

Mothers of special needs children can feel devastated, shocked and consumed by guilt. But research shows that there are few, if any, supports for mothers' mental health. Rather, resources largely focus on helping them care of their children, and not for themselves.

Depression and divorce rates for these women also exceed those of women who do not have special needs children. Therefore, it is critical to decrease the mental health burden on moms of special needs children.

University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey (UMDNJ)-University Behavioral HealthCare (UBHC) and UMDNJ-New Jersey Medical School have collaborated to establish the MOM2MOM helpline.

The MOM2MOM helpline 1-877-914-MOM2 is staffed by trained peer mom mentors who are moms with a special needs child just like you. We are also staffed by licensed professionals, and trained Mental Health specialists.

Having a special needs child can be very stressful, and sometimes it helps to be able to confide in another mom who is going through the same issues, and who understands your feelings.

When the issues run deeper, MOM2MOM is ready to help you and your family find a compatible professional for treatment if necessary.
